

Contributors

Frédéric Charillon is Professor of Political Science at the University of the Auvergne, also teaching at Science-Po, INALCO and Paris 2, and in several international universities (Euro-Mediterranean University of Fez, Morocco). He is responsible for IR programs at ENA, and has published several works on Foreign Policy Making
Frederic.charillon@gmail.com

Christian Goeschel is Senior Lecturer in Modern European History at the University of Manchester. He has previously taught at Birkbeck College, University of London, and the Australian National University. His research focuses on the interaction between politics, society, and culture in modern Europe, especially, but not exclusively in Germany and Italy. He has recently completed Mussolini and Hitler: The Forging of the Fascist Alliance (forthcoming with Yale University Press).
Christian.goeschel@manchester.ac.uk

Juliet Kaarbo is Professor of International Relations with a Chair in Foreign Policy at the University of Edinburgh, where she is the founding co-Director of the Centre for Security Research. Her research focuses on political psychology, leadership and decision making, group dynamics, foreign policy analysis and theory, parliamentary political systems, and national roles. She is Associate Editor of the journal Foreign Policy Analysis and she is the 2018 Distinguished Scholar of Foreign Policy Analysis in the International Studies Association.
j.kaarbo@ed.ac.uk

Soeren Keil is Reader in Politics and International Relations at Canterbury Christ Church University. His research focuses on the use of decentralization as a tool of conflict resolution, the Western Balkans, Europeanization and the foreign policy of new states. He is the author and editor of six books, including Multinational Federalism in Bosnia and Herzegovina (Ashgate 2013) and Understanding Federalism and Federation (co-edited with Alain Gagnon and Sean Mueller, Routledge 2015). His current work focuses on the revival of the federal idea in the post-Cold War era and new federal political models.
Soeren.Keil@canterbury.ac.uk

Edward Newman is Professor of International Security in the School of Politics and International Studies at the University of Leeds, UK. He previously worked in the Department of Political Science and International Studies at the University of Birmingham and, before that, he spent over a decade in Japan, mainly working at the United Nations University where he was Director of Studies on Conflict and Security in the Peace and Governance Programme. His most recent book is Understanding Civil Wars: Continuity and Change in Intra-State Conflict.
e.newman@leeds.ac.uk