

Guest Co-editors

Samuel B.H. Faure is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Sciences Po Saint-Germain (Printemps-CNRS). Sam's core research interests include British and French armaments policies, the defence industry in Europe and the politics of the European Union. His first book, entitled Défense européenne: émergence d'une culture stratégique commune ('European Defence: The Emergence of a Common Strategic Culture') was published in 2016. He has recently published a book chapter on Franco-British defence co-operation in the context of Brexit (Palgrave, 2019), and his research has appeared, inter alia, in European Security, French Politics, Politique européenne and Revue internationale de politique comparée.
Correspondence address: samuel.bh.faure@alumni.harvard.edu

Andy Smith is a Research Professor at the French Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques, based at the University of Bordeaux. He is a specialist of European integration, political economy and is currently conducting research on the politics of defence procurement. From the first of these angles he has notably published Le gouvernement de l'Union européenne: une sociologie politique (L.G.D.J, 2004) and Les commissaires européens: technocrates, diplomates ou politiques? (Presses de Sciences Po, 2002). As a political economist, he has conducted work on the governing of industries, e.g. The EU's Government of Industries (Routledge, 2014), Varietals of Capitalism: A Political Economy of The Changing Wine Industry (Cornell, 2016), and, more generally, on The Politics of Economic Activity (OUP, 2016). An article drawn from his ongoing work on procurement has just been accepted by British Politics.
Correspondence address: a.smith@sciencespobordeaux.fr

Contributors

Antonio Calcara is a Post-Doctoral Researcher at the LUISS “Guido Carli” University in Rome and Adjunct Professor at the Vesalius College of the Vrije Universiteit in Brussels. His research interests are in the fields of Defence and Security Studies, European Union Foreign and Security Policy, EU Defence, International Relations, International Political Economy and Public Policy. He has published in Contemporary Italian Politics, Defence Studies, European Foreign Affairs Review, European Political Science, European Security, Global Affairs, Journal of European Integration.

Marc R. DeVore is a Lecturer at the University of St. Andrews’ School of International Relations. His primary interests lie in the political economy of defence industries and in military innovation. He has published in the Review of International Political Economy, Security Studies, New Political Economy, Journal of Strategic Studies, Defence and Peace Economics, European Journal of International Security, War in History, and Terrorism and Political Violence. He has conducted field research in the Balkans, Libya, Iraq, Lebanon and the Central African Republic. He also previously advised the Central African Republic’s President Ange-Félix Patassé on national security affairs.

Catherine Hoeffler is an Associate Professor at Sciences Po Bordeaux/Centre Emile Durkheim. Her research interests lie in political economy of security, comparative public policy, and theories of European integration, with a focus on the regulation of defence markets. She has co-authored two textbooks on public policy and has published among others in the Journal of European Public Policy, the Journal of Legislative Studies and in French, in Gouvernement et Action Publique and Politique européenne.

Benoit Giry is an Associate Professor of Sociology at Sciences Po Rennes (Arènes-CNRS). His research interests include economic sociology, public policy and sociology of management of private and public organisations and resources. During his post-doctoral research in 2017, as visiting researcher at King’s College London, he worked on military weapons systems management practices and defence policy. He published recently with Andy Smith: “Defence capability in the UK since 2010: explaining change in procurement practices” (British Politics, 2019).

Thibaut Joltreau is a PhD candidate in Political Science at Sciences Po Bordeaux, Centre Emile Durkheim. Under the mentorship of his PhD supervisor Andy Smith, Thibaut has worked on various research projects in political economy, ranging from French agri-food distribution chains to the European defence industry. His own PhD dissertation analyses the regulation of the rum industry in French overseas territories to shed new light on the political relationship between these territories, mainland France, and the European Union.

Jean Joana is professor of political science at University of Montpellier. He works on defence policies and military issues. He published recently: “A Policy in Progress. France’s Diplomatic Security Policy”, in E. Cusumano, G. Kinsey eds., Diplomatic Security. A Comparative Perspective, Stanford, Stanford University Press, 2019.

Nora Kristine Stai is a postgraduate student at the University of Oxford. She holds a degree in International Relations from the University of St Andrews, and has previously worked for the Norwegian Embassy in Turkey and at the United Nations. Her research interests include security studies, civil-military relations, armaments collaboration projects and contentious politics.